

Rule
1.126
Sub
C1

B1

~~72.~~ A multi-functional hand tool comprising, opposed members, elongated handles having oppositely disposed first and second ends, and each handle having opposed sides, and means for pivotally connecting the opposed members to the handles adjacent the first ends so that the handles open and close the members in an operable mode, at least one interchangeable tool bit, sleeve means for removably holding said tool bit, said sleeve means being formed with a closed end and an open end, said open end being formed to slidably receive said tool bit, and means for pivotally connecting the sleeve means closed end to one handle second end so that the sleeve means is pivotable from an inoperable position between the one handle sides, said sleeve means being non-removably connected to said means for pivotally connecting the closed end, said handle further comprising at least one bladed tool, and means for pivotally connecting said bladed tool to one of said one handles.

~~73.~~ The hand tool of claim 72, wherein the sleeve means is formed to stow at least one double ended tool bit between the said one handle sides in the inoperable position.

~~74.~~ The hand tool of claim 72, said opposed members comprising a pliers.

~~75.~~ The hand tool of claim 72, said handles being asymmetrical.

~~76.~~ The hand tool of claim 72, said sleeve means comprising a first sleeve and a second sleeve, said second sleeve comprising a